HOCKEY By Barney

The Lacombe Seniors played to a draw on Wednesday last, when they met a team composed of players from nearly every place of importance in southern Alberta, including one of Calgary's C.C. Club players who is said to be one of the province's best players. The above team went under the name of Disbury and Olds combined teams, and most of the spectators wondered where the Disbury man was.

The entire game was a cyclone from the time the puck was faced for the first time, until the bell rang for the finish of the last twenty. The game was exceedingly clean, only three men being put on the fence. Two of these wall flowers were Calgary men and Del Garland was the only Lacombe man to pay the penalty.

The puck was faced at 8:25 and was at once played to the Olds end of the ice and a goal was scored, but not counted as there was no goal judge behind the Olds goal. Whether this was an accident or deliberately planned is not for us to say. Olds also managed to sneak in the rubber, and Lacombe's player D. Garland scored.

The second twenty started off a tie of 1 to 1 and this twenty netted each side three goals making the score at the end of this period 4 to 4.

And now we come upon the last twenty which proved to be the fastest and most furious of the game and after 15 minutes play no goals were scored. Only three minutes from the end of the game scored for Lacombe, which was followed by a score for Calgary just before the bell rang for the finish.

The return game will be played as soon as the southern team can get the best of Calgary's players.

There was considerable talk about getting our scalps at the game on Wednesday last. One of the Olds players taking offense at something we published in the account of the Olds and Lacombe game some time ago. Why he takes offense is beyond us as we always strive to tell the truth in our Sporting Writings. We have heard tell however that the truth hurts sometime and this is the only plausible reason we can see for his anger. The Olds, Calgary and Disbury combined team did not think very well of our write up, but all our readers may rest assured, that anything we may say in this account or any other account published in our columns is strictly true and can be proved by any of the spectators of the games which we report. The above may not seem to many to be very sportsman like, but when a man says that we told a deliberate lie in the write up sometime back it is nothing but fair that we defend ourselves. To our way of thinking a sport is one that can take a licking like a man—not a baby.

From the Busy Town of Olive

The meeting under the auspices of the U.F.A. last Saturday night was a decided success. The weather was perfect, the gathering large and the interest unmistakably keen. The singing of one verse of "Oh Canada" with enthusiasm opened the programme, then after a short introduction by president A. C. Johnston, the first speaker of the evening, Mr. W. C. Henry was called. Mr. Henry presented his views as he forecasted the immediate future of the farmer under this system or organization and co-operation in a very able and simple manner, and won the appreciation and applause of his attentive hearers.

When Mrs. L. C. McKinney, M. L. A. (the chief speaker of the evening) was introduced, some 200 people, sitting and standing, applauded to the echo and in her quiet, effective opening remarks, she won the admiration of her hearers. As she launched upon the main thrust of her speech, "The Farmers Opportunity," her audience was held in a spell of the keenest interest. The time has come, intimated the speaker, when the shackles, that have bound the farmers to the old political machine for many years have loosened somewhat, unconsciously but no doubt due to the wide educational influence of the Farmers Organization. The door of opportunity had last opened to the farmers and he now being sufficiently strengthened by organization and co-operation would rise to the occasion and speak in an unmistakable manner. The closing appeal of the speaker, that farmers with their affiliated bodies stand as one solidly cemented unit, was made in such a forceful and effective manner as will not be forgotten. After a few very timely and fitting remarks, by Mr. J. G. Rogers who moved a vote of thanks to the chief speakers of the evening which was seconded in a similar manner by Mayor Allison, the meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

Hot coffee and cake was served for the particular benefit of those who came from a distance and while the hall would not have accommodated any more it was the general opinion that those who did not hear the lecture certainly missed a rare educational treat.

The regular meeting of the Olive Local U.F.A. will be held on Saturday the 15th inst at 2 o'clock sharp. All members and those who have made application for membership as well as those who are desirous of becoming members are requested to be present.

Disunion as present subjects will be opened by Mr. H. J. Northcott and G. A. Foster. The political situation will be reviewed, and it is very important that all farmers in the district identify themselves with the local organization as some action, no doubt, will be taken in the immediate future.

Don't forget the box social and box social under the auspices of

The Social Butterflies

It was customary for them to go out in a gang under a German sergeant, to work in the fields just outside the city. They knew that if they managed to elude the guards, and strike out in a northerly direction, they might reach Holland and safety.

It was a bright summer's morning that they made the attempt. The guard was at the other end of the field, little thinking what was about to take place. At a given signal they lay down on the ground and started crawling towards a little wood, just east of where they had been working. All went well and having reached it, they began to run and soon were in the thickest of the wood. By this time their absence had been noted, and by the noise they knew that they were being pursued. They continued to run, halting now and again for breath. Gradually, the German guards had approached nearer, and began to fire at random. It was one of these random shots that laid Harry low. He fell to the ground, his friends stopping with him.

"Begorra, an' they've got ye," said the Irishman, stopping over him. "We can give you a lift, och sure, and beat them yet."

"No, go on yourselves," urged Harry. "I'll take a chance."

When the Germans came up, Harry as exhausted from loss of blood. He was picked up and taken back to the camp. When he had sufficiently recovered he was sent to the prison in Berlin on the Wilhelmstrasse, where he was lost to the world for nearly three years.

Meanwhile at home Mrs. Forbes lived in hope that he would return. The weekly letters were a delight to all the household, and the girls which were such loving care, provided a constant relief to the creeping sensation that often times comes into their minds, as they thought of the horrors of trench life.

For a long period of waiting, and hoping against hope, the official notice came with the cruel emphasis "Missing believed killed." That was all; Glen Ella was as if cast under shadow. The first born had gone perhaps never to return.

Chapter III — Disillusionment

"The war was over. Such was the news borne on the wings of the wind from the newsmen in the street. Although it was early morning, a dark morning too, people were beginning to move about the street. By and by sirens could be heard, church bells rang.

The telephone in the study at Glen Ella home rang for a few seconds; lights went off and on twice. The armistice was signed! This was the news conveyed to Mrs. Forbes and her daughters on the eventful eleventh of November morning.

They were soon up and clad in their everyday dresses, while Mr. Forbes got out the automobile. Then in their beautiful Studebaker Six, they made for the heart of the city. The crowds grew denser as they continued on their way, arriving just in time to join the long procession of ears in gay ribbons out to celebrate victory over the Hun.

But their rejoicing was marred by the thoughts of Harry. They had heard nothing more since that morning nearly three years ago when the fateful telegram arrived with its announcement: "Missing, believed killed." Now the war was over, the armistice had been signed and no further news.

Yet they rejoiced for the sake of the nations at war, and above all, for their own Canada, which had nobly done its share and on this night of gaiety and revelry, they retained their composure and joined in with the crowd.

But the sense of war soon passed away. From the time of the signing of the armistice, things began to assume their old aspect. The evenings out increased as time wore, until by the end of January, they were back to their usual gaieties. Bridge parties, and other forms of amusements multiplied by the hundred. This was not changed; it was a world, arising out of the depths of suffering and sorrow, but a world just as capable of giving itself to old excesses. It was just as if the war had been some cruel hideous dream, to be forgotten as quickly as possible.

Spanish influenza the after plague of the war came too, carrying off many young lives, and hitting the city so severely that funerals were very usual events.

But even, then though the Forbes had all suffered with the mysterious plague, and had happily recovered still they forgot about it as soon as the ban was lifted and began the usual round of gaiety.

It was on a certain evening in January, that Mrs. Forbes and her daughters were out for a table of bridge at the home of the Shavers. Elias Shaver was the head of a large financial corporation in the city, a very influential man indeed. They could not possibly refuse such an invitation.

In the midst of the play, the telephone rang, and the page called for Mrs. Forbes. She rose and went to the phone.

"Hello—yes—oh! that's your father; I hardly recognized your voice—come home! What's the matter—a telegram! from the war office!"

She dropped the receiver and rushed in "Gertrude! Marjorie! Harry's safe. He's coming home, thank God!" and she collapsed into a seat.

"Will you excuse us?" asked Gertrude of her hostess, after a moment or so. "Harry is alive and on his way home. We must go home."

"The guests all rose to shake hands and congratulated them on their astounding news."

"Yes! We're sorry to have you go. The game was getting so interesting, but it's splendid to think that Harry is coming back. Let us know when he is expected to arrive," said Mrs. Shaver.

They were soon at Glen Ella, where Mr. Forbes met them with the telegram in his hand.

"Oh, it's too good. I can hardly believe it said Mrs. Forbes, as she went to her husband.

"It's absolutely correct though, thank God."

The girls crowded round as they read the news, and they all rejoiced in the good fortune.

"I must call up Marguerite," said Gertrude. "This will make such a difference in her life. She's been a cast down, since she thought he was missing. My but she'll be delighted."

She called up Marguerite, who was overjoyed at the news and could hardly refrain from going down and joining them.

As for Harry, he was even now on his way across the Atlantic. Confined in round tower prison, half starved and nearly dead from disease, his constitution stood the test, and he was even now nearly recovered from the privations through which he passed.

It was a beautiful morning in February that he arrived home, and when he stepped off the train from Montreal, he was given a rousing welcome.

How joyous it was to meet loved ones once more! How pleasant it was to be near to his future wife Marguerite!

But he was not long home till he realized that the old life was just the same. He had been told of deeds of self sacrifice, of the glorious things that had been done while he was away; but now that he was back he found men and women drifting back into old grooves of selfishness and self-indulgence.

It was at church one Sunday accompanied by Marguerite that he made the momentous decision of his life.

"You have been, some of you," observed the preacher, "over in Flanders fighting in the cause of truth and righteousness. Why not continue the fight over here? Canada is calling you to the battle of the new era. The church has given of her best to make the world safe for democracy; will you take their places. If there is anyone here, he concluded, "who hears the call of the new day, let him come to me when the service closes."

Harry wended his way to the Vestry, and then and there offered himself to the work of the ministry. The minister was glad of such a splendid recruit for the church's warfare, and arranged for him to call later.

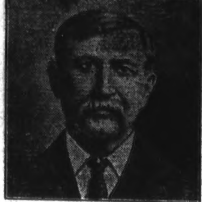

"Well, Marguerite, I've taken the step you always wanted me to take. I was in the valley of indecisions when I left, but I am there no longer. When I went overseas, I thought I had left behind forever the materialistic selfishness of the world. Now that I have come back, I have come to the conclusion that men and women are just as selfish as they were before. There will be war again, unless the world is redeemed, and the only thing that can save the world is Christianity. That's why I've decided to enter the work of the church."

"And I'm glad you've done so," said Marguerite. "I always wanted you to, but what will your father think of it? And your sisters?"

"I hardly think they'll worry much. Father wanted me to fill his place in the firm, and I'm really sorry to disappoint him."

I lost so much weight—going from 185 pounds to 146 pounds—that I became alarmed and saw several doctors who, however, did me no good. Finally, a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'."

"In a week, there was improvement. The constipation was corrected; and soon I was free of pain, headaches and that miserable feeling that accompanies Dyspepsia. I continued to take this splendid fruit medicine and now I am well, strong and vigorous."

"Well, I'm with you anyway. Far out on the western prairies, we'll go together, and do our bit in winning back the world of men and women for God and Canada!" and she clasped his hand in token of her pledge.

Pts Up to You!

Why should you go through life with half sight, or poor vision? The other day I fitted a man with glasses who had gone through life so near sighted that he could not recognise a friend across the street. This man had never known the joy of clear vision, and it was a pleasure to see his delight when he viewed distant objects for the first time.

Then there is a person who has a headache after reading for a short time. It is more painful that the near sighted condition, but yields equally when proper glasses are worn. If you are having trouble with your eyes, have them tested.

Vice Pres. H. Flewelling.
Sec.-Treas. J. Henderson, Jr.
Board of Directors (S. J. Henderson, Fred Langrock, Roy Millard, and Wm. Teward).

The club has been fortunate in securing the services of the Belgian stallion ("Cesar 7779") owned by Wm. Smith, Lacombe. This stallion is a good specimen and typical of his breed possessing size (weight 2300 lbs.). Correct conformation and straight action.

This stallion "Cesar 7779" is standing at a service fee of $21.00 for the season of 1919 and any members paying the annual fee of Five dollars may become a member of the club. This money after meeting all legitimate expenses of organization and etc. is placed to the credit of the club with a view of reducing the service fee to be paid by the member.

Members wishing the services of the stallion must promptly apply to the secretary in writing on or before Mar. 21, 1919 stating the number of mares they wish to have served. In the event of too many applications, the vacant nominations shall be balloted for.

For further information apply to John Henderson, Jr. Secretary-Treasurer.

Outline of Federal Scheme

The farmers of any district wishing to work for betterment of horse breeding by encouraging the use of sound individually, excellent, pure bred sires, may form a Breeder's club for the purpose of hiring a pure bred stallion to travel their district for the benefit of the members. This club, by organizing under and adopting the constitution and by-laws, and confirming the various rules and regulations governing this grant, may participate in the Federal Assistance given to such clubs as hereinafter set forth—

1 The club shall guarantee the stallion owner a definite number of mares at a certain service fee per mare, said mares to be in good breeding condition, and not affected with any contagious or infectious disease.

2 All stallions named by Clubs for the purpose of securing Government assistance must be submitted to an examination by an authorized veterinary surgeon.

3 The Secretary of the Club shall forward to the Live Stock Branch, with the regular application, a list of its members, also a copy of the memorandum of agreement signed by both parties interested. This agreement shall not become binding until approved by the Live Stock Commissioner.

4 The minimum service fee shall be not less than twelve dollars, and maximum shall not exceed twenty-five dollars.

5 All service fees shall be collected by the Club.

6 Payment of service fees shall be made as follows; one-third of the service fee for each guaranteed mare shall be paid by the Club to the stallion owner at the end of the service season.

7 The remaining two-thirds of each service fee shall be paid when the mare proves to be in foal. That is to say, the remaining two-thirds shall be paid only for such mares as prove to be in foal.

8 At the end of the service season the stallion owner shall furnish the Live Stock Branch with a sworn statement setting forth the number of mares bred to his horse and the name of the owner of each.

9 The Live Stock Branch shall pay the club an amount equal to 33 1/3 per cent of the total amount paid to the stallion owner at the close of the service season on the actual number of mares bred but not exceeding the guaranteed number, on receipt of the stallion owner's statement and of a properly audited and sworn statement signed and declared by the President and Secretary.

10 The Live Stock Branch shall pay the Club a second grant equal to 33 1/3 per cent of the amount paid to the stallion owner on the total number of mares that prove to be in foal, that is, 33 1/3 per cent of two thirds the service fee paid for each mare that proves to be in foal, on receipt of a properly audited and sworn statement signed and declared by the President and Secretary of the Club.

The object of the club is the improvement of the horse breeding industry of the district by the introduction of first class stallions, and to take advantage of the Federal Assistance granted to such clubs by the Dominion Live Stock Branch.

Why Berlin Wasn't Bombed

Returned Canadian, Aviator Explains how Hun Capital Escaped Why wasn't Berlin bombed by British Aviators?

That is a question which has been asked time and again, both in this country and in England. The reasons are many, and some cannot yet be made public, but this fact may be stated.

Had the armistice not been signed November 11—Monday, it will be remembered, a serious, and probably successful attempt would have been made to raid Essen the following night, and to raid Berlin Friday or Saturday of that very week. So much the residents of Berlin missed and it is difficult to imagine their spending a Merry Christmas or Happy New Year under the intolerable conditions which would have existed if the active warring had not ceased.

The distance from the Independent war aerodromes to Berlin by air is 482 miles. This was too long a journey to be made by ordinary Handleys, but he job was to have been done by the Super-Handleys and D. H. 10's or Vimy Bombers, which with loads could do 100 miles or more per hour and the latter machine could remain in the air for ten and a half hours.

The Vimy bombers could make 167 miles an hour without a load and with nearly two tons of bombs on board could average 104 miles an hour, as was shown by tests carried out extensively in England during the past summer and fall.

Just how close to Berlin came to being treated with a dose of Hun machine may be seen when it is learned that first active service D. H. 10 reached France, Saturday, October 26, and the first week in November reached the Independent Force territory.

And an observer were selected for the work, one specially qualified pilot being hurriedly recalled from leave in England to undertake the stunt. The week of the armistice hardly seems when it is learned that it was the fullness of the Hunter's Moon for which the members of 100 squadron selected for the job, were waiting.

One of the minor difficulties that had to be solved was the question of a map. To the laymen this may not seem of importance, but when the map on a Cologne raid is about eight feet long, how large must a Berlin raid map be?

Another raid on a much more pretentious scale, was being planned by a well-known Winnipegger, a Lieut-Colonel in the air force who was training a wing (several squadrons) on the east of Norfolk. His squadron was being equipped with super-Handleys, and when the number of machines desired had been delivered it was planned to send a huge fleet to visit the Rhine towns each province night. By night, during the winter months, these armies would strafe the Huns, mainly in Essen and Berlin and North Rhine towns, by day they would get a well earned sleep in a secure English bed—(if they could).

The Italians sent a squadron of Capronis into Bohemia as soon as peace with Austria became a practical fact, and if the Huns had turned down the armistice terms it had been arranged to send a Caproni squadron with detachments from America, French and British wings. From the particular spot chosen in Bohemia, it was just a nice little joy-ride of about 115 miles each way, and making an allowance for attaining height, even the older type Handley could do this easily in five hours. As an ordinary Handley can remain in the air more than eight hours there was ample margin.

How effectively did the bombing of Germany by the Independent Force and other squadrons of the Royal air force contribute to the forcing of Germany to beg for an armistice?

The opinion of those engaged in the work, and also of military experts outside the Air Force strongly upholds the view that the continuous night of day attacks from the air on the Rhine and other Hun towns contributed tremendously not only to the armistice situation, but also did perhaps more than any other single factor to obtain for London immunity from air raids for the 6 months proceeding November 11.

Lord Weir, air minister, is said to have told Premier Borden some months before the final collapse that the Rhine and Saar towns were getting it much more severely than the public knew, and that a situation akin to panic was gradually but surely arising.

The systematic bombing of military objectives in Germany began fourteen months ago, in October, 1917, and progressed, with renewed vigor, from June 1st of this year, when General Trenchard took over the command of the squadrons, later nine in number which constituted the British Independent air force. A huge programme was laid out a year and a half ago, which it is believed called for 300 squadrons, British, French Americans and Italian, but all countries concerned fell far short of the mark.

Besides the large numbers of squadrons, operations from the English coast and Dunkirk, the Independent Air Force had, when peace broke out, four day bombing and five night bombing squadrons, located south of Nancy, and almost behind the American front. During the thirteen months of special reprisal work 700 raids were made on large German towns German aerodromes established for the defence of the Rhine and other military objectives in Alsace-Lorraine and Germany. More than 725 tons of bombs were dropped in this period.

Report from the intelligence agents showed that the German towns so treated got colossal "wind up" when they found their own defences unable to cope with the attacks. At the time of the St. Mihiel push, for example, one railroad siding was made so hot that according to a captured German letter, it was shown that all troops had for several days to be marched to another junction twenty miles away.

There was never any let up in work of the raiders, day or night except when weather conditions caused a temporary halt, or when casualties had been so severe that some squadron had to await the arrival of new machines or new officers.

The day bombers usually suffered more severely than their night flying confreres. One example, about three weeks before the signing of the armistice, twelve machines set out from No. 110 squadron, flying "Nine A's." that is, De-Havilland 9 A's equipped with the Liberty motor. They raided Cologne, and of the dozen, only two returned safely.

The day raiding was done on D.H.9, D.H. 9A, and D. 11, four machines, the last named being equipped with Rolls Royce engines. The night work was principally done by Handley-Page's although it was August until F.E. 2D's were finally "washed out." The casualties on the huge Handley's were caused to a great extent by crashing owing to faulty landings and altered atmospheric conditions.

The instructions from the Royal Air Force officials to airmen starting on a raid were very definite, and the limitations stringent. They were not to indulge in indiscriminate bombing, but were to release their "eggs" only on certain targets, or specified alternatives, should weather conditions advise. Every British pilot and observer felt that he was bringing the war slowly but inevitably to an earlier conclusion. Of course in dropping bombs from a height which is anywhere from 200 ft. to four miles, innocents may suffer but that was merely a hazard of war.

The German aim seemed to be exactly a contrary one; hospitals and defenceless towns were their specialties.

One of the greatest difficulties in bombing, especially in the night, is to find the right target. London is an easy one to find and before the A. A. barrage and balloon aprons became such a terror to Hun night raiders they used to get over London and let go indiscriminate salvos.

During those feverish weeks in October and November, when people hoped peace might be clinched at last, the Independent Force, despite a prevailing unsuitability of weather, worked even more intensely to drive a few clinching nails. There was no let up to wait and see "what would happen."

Under date of October 17 General Trenchard issued the following statement (in part) to his squadrons: "It is more than ever necessary for a determined air effort to be made by the Independent Force, as this would help to bring about the decisive defeat of the enemy."

"I desire to point out that if our thoughts are allowed to wander to expressions such as 'Is this the last raid?' and 'Is this the last night?' etc., we may not be using our fullest energies to defeat the enemy. This will undoubtedly mean the war will be prolonged, and if it is prolonged, even a day beyond what is necessary owing to our energies not being concentrated on the defeat of the enemy then we are, one and all responsible for the extra casualties incurred."

THE MOLINE TRACTOR

Here is what some of the Alberta Farmers say about it: "I broke 160 acres (7 1/2 acres per day) and used only one quart of fresh water daily."—T. J. Polley, Calgary.

"I threshed 70,000 bushels of grain with 22 in Separator and had no trouble."—O. D. Cook, Mirror, Alta.

"In every respect the Moline exceeded all expectations. Without any previous experience two boys plowed nearly 120 acres of land in 3 weeks."—J. D. McArthur, Calgary.

"I don't know any tractor that can do better work or be more satisfactory to customer than the Moline."—H. E. Hutchings, Edmonton.

"Two great features on the Moline tractor are weight and construction of plows, and operator being able to ride on them."—Campbell Bros., Eyremore.

"I plowed 100 acres of stubble and broke 60 acres of gumbo with the Moline this spring."—L. G. Becroft, Edmonton.

"I double-diced over 40 acres a day with my Moline tractor."—J. Baird, Carbon.

"Your Model D. Moline is working to my satisfaction."—J. B. Veefkind, Rimby, Alta.

"I am convinced that the Moline is both practical and economic."—H. H. Honens, Calgary.

"I could just tear the hind end out of a 23 in. separator with my Moline. I used it with a binder, as well as plows."—Geo. Thomson, Alliance.

No wonder it did it well. Gears are enclosed; electric starter; head light and a differential that makes the wheel on dry land pull the tractor out of a hole.

Bentley Notes

Messrs. Thorp Bros. of Bentley Garage are showing a film of the Moline Tractor, in all its uses in general farm work, at the Veteran Theatre, Lacombe, on Friday and Saturday evenings this week. No farmer should miss this opportunity of seeing this screen presentation of this famous, one man tractor, as it is at present working on thousands of farms throughout the United States and Canada.

Pte. Clifford S. Clapp arrived on Tuesday to spend a few days at the parsonage, visiting his mother and sister. Pte. Clapp went overseas with the 63rd Battalion from Edmonton, in April 1916, and arrived home last week. He has been wounded three times and was in the hospital for 15 months before leaving for Canada. He took part in the battles of Somme and Vimy Ridge.

Mattresses and springs at Morrison and Johnston, Ltd., Bentley. The debate in Stephenson Schoolhouse, on March 1st was very interesting and much enjoyed by those who were present. The night was very stormy and only 20 were out. The affirmative won by one point, being in favor of the Rural life.

On Saturday March 15th at 8 p.m. in Stephenson Schoolhouse. There will be another debate, the subject being "Tractor Vs Horses." H. P. Hansen, J. L. Robinson and Edw. Haarsdal will take the affirmative, and Messrs. J. C. Moulton, Oscar Vig and Albert Haarsdal will support the negative. It is hoped there will be nice weather and a large turnout.

To the farmers of Bentley district! We intend handling a full line of Saddle Hardware for your convenience. We want your support, and any suggestion you make us regarding this line will have our careful consideration. Our first shipment is in. Come in and look it over—Morrison, and Johnston, Ltd., Bentley.

When the Red Cross Annual report came to hand a few weeks ago we noted in the report of donations an error in regard to Bentley. We are credited with 2 gals. preserves and 60 bushels of potatoes. We wrote to head quarters and received the following reply: Dear Sir:—

We are in receipt of your letter of March 3rd and regret exceedingly that a mistake was made in the annual report with regard to donations to Red Cross from your branch. The 36 quarts of preserves were received and acknowledged at the time, but through some error, they were omitted when the report was made up. They are correctly entered in our records here.

We regret the error very much, and apologize for same. I remain Yours faithfully,
Mary E. Waage
Hon. Supt. of supplies and joint secretary, Provincial Branch, Alberta.

About 25 farmers turned out to the meeting in the church on Saturday afternoon to organize a local of the United farmers of Alberta. Mr. J. R. Hutton was appointed chairman, and Mr. P. Slaught for secretary of the meeting. Some discussions took place as to who could join the association, but it was finally agreed that this could be left to the discretions of the local. 29 men signed the roll as charter members and the election of officers was proceeded with. The following are the officers: Mr. J. G. Suggitt, President, acclamation; Mr. J. R. Hutton, Vice President; Mr. Morley Crawford, Secretary-Treasurer.

Directors—Messrs. G. Graham, Geo. Hopkins, D. A. Whitesell, J. F. Miller, and Olaf Larson. It was decided to call the local "Bentley" and the Bentley local will meet the first and third Saturdays in the month at 9 p.m. in the Club Room of the Church. The first meeting will be held next Saturday evening. It is to be hoped that every farmer in the vicinity of Bentley will support this organization with their membership and attendance at the meetings. This will require an effort and determination but it is well worth the while.

Mr. C. A. Putland passed thru town last week on his way to Rimby on a business trip. He says there is quite a difference between here and B.C. where he was a couple of weeks ago. He was storm-stayed in the mountains for a day.

Churns in three sizes at Morrison and Johnston, Ltd., Bentley. The Bentley Garage unloaded a cartload of implements last week. They have also five Moline Tractors ready for the spring rush.

Mr. A. V. Cocks left on Friday for Vancouver. Japalpa for your floors, woodwork and chairs in all colors at Morrison and Johnston, Ltd., Bentley, Alta.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Crawford arrived on Friday from Edmonton, where they have spent the last two months. Another very successful meeting of the Y. P. S. was held on Friday night when Mr. J. H. Suggitt gave an interesting address on the gold rule, "38 and 1/2." He spent over three years in Alaska and kept the audience very much interested as he told of his experiences. Quite a number of questions were asked, afterwards which the speaker answered and enlarged upon. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Suggitt at the conclusion of the meeting.

The next meeting will be in charge of the Celebrity Committee who are putting on a short play and a miscellaneous program. It is expected that Miss Nuttall whose readings were so much enjoyed a month ago will be present and will take part in the program. There will be a collection taken at this meeting. Everyone is invited to be present.

See our full and up-to-date line of kitchen utensils Morrison and Johnston, Ltd.

Mr. Detlef Weise underwent an operation in Lacombe Hospital last week. He is progressing as well as possible and returned home on Monday.

Mr. H. A. Brownlow and son Harry were in Edmonton the fore part of the week. Watch for further announcement of prizes for Masquerade Dance at the Veteran Theatre on Monday March 17th.

If you want to spend an evening of entertainment and pleasure, remember that the Veteran theatre is running every night. Veteran has secured two of the best serials on the road, "The Brass Bullet" which is now running on Monday and Tuesday nights, and "A Fight for Millions," which is showing on Friday and Saturday nights. The Brass Bullet is one of the latest and newest pictures travelling. It will be shown on Tuesday night only next week on account of the masquerade ball on Monday night. This serial is full of thrills from start to finish, and is intermixed with comedy, and every movie fan in town should see it. The pictures shown at this theatre are all A1 productions and when you hear of a picture being shown at the Veteran, you don't have to ask "Is it any good?" because pictures shown here are always good.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE The Women's Institute wish to announce to the farm women of the district that the rest room is to be moved to the brick block on Dolmiste St., the U. F. A. having turned over the building to the women.
